

WOMEN IN THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION

A FIVE-PART SERIES VIA ZOOM

THURSDAYS, MAY 20 - JUNE 17 • 7-8PM

The revolutionary war was fought on battlefields, in forests, and on the home-front - and the contributions of American women shaped the fight at every turn. Many American women fought for the patriot cause while almost as many others fought to stop them. The incredible spectrum of female participation in America's founding conflict defies easy categorization and reminds us that the legacy of the revolution for American women was not simple, single, or remotely cut and dried. This five-part course presented by University of Maryland history professor, Dr. Richard Bell, examines the varied roles of women in the American Revolution.
